

If you have two minutes...

Curlies need some TLC during the winter months, and the latest silicone oil pen makes it simple. Just swipe the tip over your nails whenever moisture urge strikes. There's also a easy way to banish wrinkles if you on't have the time or funds for laser treatments or injections: new line-filler pens — containing silicone to lift and tighten skin on contact, as well as light-reflecting pigments to brighten it even out skin tone — take years off your face in minutes. And there is no doubt that a sweep of mascara across the lashes can do wonders to awaken red-looking eyes. But a new formula that smoothly attaches to your lashes soon application, extending past your natural tips, lets you achieve dramatic length without the fuss of applying faux ones. "It will stay on all day without having to clean up or touch up," says Su Han, an L.A.-based celebrity makeup artist, of the new mascara. And if you find your hair looking dull throughout the day, try the latest hair-styling aid that promises to add shine to your locks with a quick, mess-free sweep: the hair sheet. The infused towelette comes in a portable package, all you need to do is rub it over your hair to tame tresses. The best part? You can pop each of these products into your purse.

If you have one minute...

Women who find themselves putting on the finishing touches in their car each morning will surely love these one-minute wonders. A bevy of portable perfumes with roll-on applicators make discreet touch-ups easy and promise no messy spills. If you're prone to shiny skin, keep a pack of blotting papers in your bag to tame grease without needing a mirror and loose powder. A quick and easy way to open up your face is by sweeping a brow gel over your arches. Opt for a tinted one that sets brows in place and lend you a polished overall look. And to ensure you're always giving your best smile, keep a pack of teeth-brightening ampoules in your purse. They come in especially handy after a glass of red wine or that third latte of the day. Simply pop one out, rub it over your teeth and then toss it away. Teeth are left instantly whiter and brighter. Finally, hydrate and add colour to lips in one fell swoop with a tinted gloss. A new formula goes on clear, but actually boosts the natural colour of your lips.
